KORRESPONDENSIE IN AFRIKAANS, ENGELS OF DUITSCH.

To Our Customers and Patrons.

¶ In presenting this, our Annual Catalogue, we take this opportunity of thanking our numerous customers for their liberal support during the past years, and we hope to merit and maintain in the future a continuance of their support by supplying only strong, well ripened Trees and Plants.

¶ The large number of testimonials received, stating the entire satisfaction of customers, is ample proof that we are succeeding in our endeavour to gain satisfied clients by giving the best possible value for money.

¶ Our stock of deciduous Trees and Roses is increasing yearly, but owing to the greatly increased demand for our Trees we expect to be sold out of several lines before the end of the season; customers are therefore advised to order early to avoid disappointment.

Yours obediently,

ROSS NURSERIES.

Business Terms and Conditions.

THIS PRICE LIST CANCELS ALL PREVIOUS QUOTATIONS.

All communications should be addressed :

Ross Nurseries, Ross Siding, via Amabele, C.P.

All Quotations are subject to being unsold at the time of execution of order.

Forwarding Goods. All goods are delivered f.o.r. Ross Siding, unless otherwise stated. Customers take all risks in transport or delay of goods.

Every Care is taken in supplying goods true to name. Should, however, a mistake occur, we would be obliged if customers would notify us at once, when same will be rectified.

Unknown Customers are requested to accompany their orders with a remittance. Cheques and P.O.O.'s made payable to Ross Nurseries, Komgha. All small orders should be accompanied by cash.

Packing Material will be charged at cost price.

Customers making their own selection from this catalogue are requested to give a few supplementary names, so that we may be able to complete the order, in case any of the first mentioned varieties should be sold out. If no such list is given, we will give substitutes of the nearest variety or size, unless advised not to do so.

Every order should give full forwarding instructions, if by rail or post, which Station or Post Office.

Small orders up to 11 lbs. weight will be forwarded per Agricultural Parcel Post, as this is the quickest and safest mode of transit.

Booking orders. Orders may be booked at any time of the year. We will then forward when advised, or at the proper season for planting; no extra charge is made.

ROSES

Roses may be planted from June onwards till the end of September, or in late seasons till the middle of October, also during the months of December and January where Summer rains occur.

ABBREVIATIONS.

- H.P. (Hybrid Perpetual).—This class of roses is very hardy, highly fragrant, and ranging in colours from pure white to the darkest red. They are, however, not so free flowering as the Teas and Hybrid Teas.
- T. (Tea Scented).—A class of perpetual blooming roses, with extremely delicate colours and delicious fragrance.
- H.T. (Hybrid Tea).—This class furnishes us with some of the freest flowering and most delightful roses in cultivation. Most roses of recent introduction belong to this class.
- C. (China Roses).—Of small growth, very free flowering, very pretty.
- S. (Single Roses).
- N. (Noisette).—These bloom mostly in clusters, sweet scented; most vigorous growers and very suitable for pillars.
- B. (Bourbon).—Hardy and free bloomers; very good in the autumn.
- Dwf. P. (Dwarf Polyantha).—These roses grow from 18 to 24 in. high, bloom in large clusters, nearly all the year round. Very showy, and very suitable for edging to beds or borders.
- P. (Polyantha).—This class of roses consists of strong growers—only suitable for covering walls, pergolas, arches, etc. They have handsome foliage, flower mostly in large clusters, and soon cover plenty of space.
- R. (Rambler).—These also grow vigorously, and are best suitable for arches. They also make good pillar roses, in which case they are very effective.
- W. (Wichuraiana).—A type of rose recently brought into prominence. The type and its hybrids are very free flowering and rapid rampant or creeping growers. They are very useful for covering arches, poles, pergolas, or as creepers over rockwork. Being evergreen, they are always very effective, the foliage being of a glossy, deep green colour.

CULTURAL REMARKS.

If it should happen that, after delay in transit, the roots of trees do not appear fresh, place same immediately in water, or cover them with moist soil; if necessary the whole trees can be covered with water or soil. Roses want to be severely pruned before planting. To reduce evaporation, and in case of parcels post to reduce bulk also, we will cut the trees back to the length required, unless otherwise advised. Any good garden soil may be considered suitable for roses, although they do best in heavier clay and loam. The ground should be well prepared some time before planting. In most cases, it will be necessary to dig it up from two to three feet deep, incorporating well rotted manure to the full depth. Take care that no fresh manure comes in contact with the roots, as many roses die as a result of this error.

Plant so that the union of stock and bud are well covered with soil. Water thoroughly and bring dry, loose soil back over the waterhole, to prevent caking of the soil.

Roses should be pruned severely each winter, to induce them to make strong growths with large, well formed flowers. The stronger growers can be pruned longer than the weaker growers. The latter should have all the fine wood removed, and only three or more strong growths left, which should be cut from 6 to 12 in. long. The Pernetiana class and the singles require very little pruning. Climbers and ramblers need have only dead and unripe wood removed, besides being kept within their allotted space.

We have much pleasure in offering the following list of roses from a well selected stock. Customers may rely on getting good plants, true to name. It is in the interest of the customers to order early, as the strongest plants are sold first, while later in the season, some varieties are almost sure to be sold out.

Deciduous Fruit Trees.

The season for planting deciduous fruit trees commences in May, and continues until September.

The success of fruit growing will largely depend on the amount of care exercised at the time of planting. The ground should be ploughed and subsoiled and well pulverised before the planting season. Where ploughing is impossible, the soil should be trenched two or three feet deep. For large orchards, the practice of dynamiting the ground is recommendable. Before planting, cut away all bruised and broken roots, cutting, so that the new wound will rest on the soil. Plant the trees to the same depth as they were growing in the nursery; the groundline is easily seen by the difference in colour of the bark. Plant the tree perfectly upright, and press the soil firmly round the roots, after spreading them out.

Plant rather higher than lower, than the tree was standing in the nursery, as they are sure to sink a little when the soil settles down. Leave a hole round each tree, to receive at least a bucket full of water directly after planting. When the water has soaked into the soil, the remaining soil may be filled in the hole. After planting, water the trees once a fortnight—should the weather keep dry. Do not give a little water each day, as this will either tend to make the soil sour or not penetrate to the roots.

If treated in this manner, fruit trees can successfully be planted in dry soil.
